that my wife was not in her right mind; I think the cause of that was the different operations which she went under." Charlotte, who at this time was out in the hall, evidently got angry at this remark, and she came in and said to her father (Mr. Mills), "She at no time was crazy, but had more brains than you."

I learned that the name of the shoe factory at which Mills worked is known as Wichert & Gardiner, Inc., #62 Schenectady Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Mr. Mills again told me that at no time did he leave his house from the moment he returned to his supper up until about 10.05 p.m., when he went down on the stoop and there he met Mr. Kelly, who was leaving the house and waiting for the South Amboy car which is due at about 10.10 p.m., as Mr. Kelly must make that car in order to get to work on time. Mills said that Charlotte and Dan came in at 10 o'clock while he was still in the house - On this point there was contradiction between Charlotte and Mrs. Mills. - Charlotte says when she come home with Dan and lit the gas, Jim Mills was not there.

Mr. Mills then showed me many numerous letters which he had received. He again criticised the Authorities, blaming the Hall's money for hindering justice, and he told me of information that he had received in an anonymous letter with regard to Gorsline. He said that in that letter it stated that Gorsline was at the Y. M. C. A. in his car which was parked out in front - That Mr. *J*ordon who is very friendly with Gorsline, and by the way his wife is one of the choir singers, entered Gorsline's car and drove off in the direction of DeRussey's Lane, as the Gordons live over towards Middlebush, and that he saw Gorsline and Gordon who committed this crime.

Mr. Mills they commented on Gorsline and Miss Rastell, saying that Gorsline admitted that he took Miss Rastell to her home, and that he left her home at about five minutes after ten. If this is true, it would be possible for Gorsline to have committed this crime.
